

Abstract of th Disclosur

The present invention of a method of determining remaining film thickness in polishing process can provide a technology for controlling a polishing amount of CMP in a device isolating process with satisfactory accuracy regardless of the ratio between the area of each of device forming regions and that of each of trench regions, the type of abrasive, etc.